Understudy: Snow White & 4
Dear Friends,

We are so pleased to share with you the third show of SCT’s 45th season—Snow White. This production epitomizes all that makes theatre exciting—great writing, direction, design, and performances, all serving a timeless story told from a new perspective. We love the opportunity to challenge old assumptions and offer young people a view of the world that amplifies inclusivity.

The creativity and skill of the artists involved is truly spectacular. The script by playwright Greg Banks is brilliantly crafted, clever, and moves at a driving pace. We are thrilled to welcome back Desdemona Chiang who previously directed the powerful production of Naomi Iizuka’s The Journal of Ben Uchida: Citizen 13559 at SCT. Des makes all this work seamlessly with her propensity for humor and play. The virtuoso cast and dynamic design team round out an extraordinary collaboration.

This production also marks the last opening for current Artistic Director Courtney Sale. Courtney leaves SCT at the end of February to assume the Nancy L. Donahue Artistic Director position at Merrimack Repertory Theatre in Lowell, MA. We wish Courtney tremendous success in her next chapter. We are fortunate we will feel her impact next season with three SCT commissions slated for our stages!

Thank you for being with us at SCT and celebrating our 45 years of bringing high quality theatre to young audiences.

Enjoy the show!
Kevin Malgesini,
Managing Director
Seattle Children’s Theatre and Microsoft share a passion for creativity, learning and excellence. Year after year, Seattle Children’s Theatre delivers high quality entertainment that captivates the imaginations of young people and their families, throughout the Pacific Northwest. That’s why Microsoft Philanthropies is proud to sponsor the 2019–2020 Season.

Community involvement is an integral part of our culture at Microsoft. We support the work of local nonprofits and encourage employee investment and volunteerism. Our employees respond in an incredible way, volunteering thousands of hours and contributing each year to local nonprofits, including Seattle Children’s Theatre.

A thriving arts and cultural scene, a network of human services providers, and a world class education system are critical to the continued vitality and attractiveness of the Puget Sound region. Through partnerships with organizations such as Seattle Children’s Theatre, we aim to create an environment where the arts will thrive for generations to come.

On behalf of Microsoft and our employees in the Puget Sound area, we thank Seattle Children’s Theatre for enriching our community.

Enjoy the show!

Experiencing the theatre is a group activity shared not only with the actors, but also with the people sitting around you. Your attention and participation help the actors perform better, and allows the rest of the audience to enjoy the show. We invite you to laugh when it is funny, cry when it is sad, gasp when it is shocking, but refrain from talking during the show, as it disturbs audience members and performers alike.

Leave cell phones, tablets, hand held games, and other distracting and noise-making electronic devices at home or turn them completely off.

Gum and food must stay in the lobby. Drinks are only allowed if they have a lid.

The lights dimming and going out signal the audience to quiet down and settle in your seats: the play is about to begin.

Don’t talk with your neighbors during the play. It distracts people around you and the actors on stage.

Remain in your seat during the play. Please use the restroom before or after the show, as well as during intermission.

During the curtain call remain in your seat and applaud because this is part of the performance too. The actors will come out on stage one more time to say thank you for your participation as an audience member.
This show is performed by two characters named SW and 4 who often switch characters mid-scene. SW begins as the Queen, lamenting how she is cold and lonely. 4 enters and the two argue as the show was not supposed to start yet. 4 thinks SW should have waited for the rest of the actors to arrive. SW responds the audience was already in their seats. After brief audience interaction, they decide to begin. The Queen sings about being lonely and wanting a baby. She pricks her finger and wishes for a child with lips as red as blood, hair as black as the bark of trees, and a heart as pure as snow. Then, Snow White is born.

Shortly after Snow White’s birth, her mother dies. A year later, her father, the King, marries a very pretty woman whose obsession with beauty makes her proud and arrogant. The new Queen places a magic mirror on her wall, which she often speaks to, saying “Mirror on the wall, who in this land is the fairest of all?” The mirror replies, “You, my Queen, are fairest of all.” This pleases the Queen to no extent, so she continues to ask the mirror over and over again for years.

In the meantime, Snow White grows up. The Queen is very strict and will not let Snow White have any friends or go outside. The Queen tells her that it’s very dark and dangerous outside the castle. Snow White wanders the halls of the castle, telling jokes to herself, and feeding little animals. She also grows quite beautiful. One morning, when the Queen asks the mirror her question, the mirror replies, “You, my Queen, may have a beauty quite rare, but Snow White is a thousand times more fair.” This causes the Queen to fly into a rage, and say many cruel things to Snow White.

The Queen’s jealousy grows and grows until she decides she must get rid of Snow White. The Queen summons a Huntsman. She orders him to take Snow White into the forest, kill her, and bring back her liver and lungs. The Huntsman reluctantly agrees and takes Snow White into the forest. The two walk for a long time until the Huntsman finally stops. As Snow White is looking away, he draws his knife to stab the girl, but she sees him and asks why he has a knife. The Huntsman tells Snow White of his orders, and she asks him not to kill her. The Huntsman changes his mind and implores Snow White to run away and never come back. She runs and The Huntsman kills a wild pig instead. He takes the “proof” back to the Queen who then eats the organs.

As the sun is setting Snow White finds a house, which we learn very quickly is the house where 4 lives—with some other Dwarfs who have no names, they simply go by numbers. Snow White knocks on the door. No one answers. She goes inside, finds a bed, and falls asleep. Later that day, the Dwarfs arrive home to find Snow White sleeping in their bed.

4 and the other Dwarfs (whom 4 also plays) argue about what to do about the sleeping girl. 1 and 2 want to kick her out, 5 and 6 think she should stay, 1 and 5 fight each other, Snow White wakes up.

1 and 2 tell Snow White she has to leave, and she agrees. Then 7, who is the oldest of the men, asks Snow White about her past, and they all learn how she came to be in their house. Most of them are moved by her tale, but 1 and 2 still want her gone. Eventually 7 convinces the Dwarfs to let Snow White stay and they all sing and dance together.

Every day, the Dwarfs leave to dig for coal in the mines. They tell Snow White not to come with them as it is dirty and dark in the mines. They instruct her to not stray too far from the house or open the door to anyone. She stays nearby, playing in the woods.

Back at the castle, the Queen still believes Snow White is dead. One day she questions the magic mirror again. The Mirror replies, “You, my Queen have a beauty most rare, but beyond the woods, where the seven Dwarfs dwell, Snow White is living.” This incenses the Queen and she makes a plan to finish her off once and for all. The Queen disguises herself like an old woman to find Snow White.

The Queen arrives in disguise at the house and persuades Snow White to let her in so Snow White can purchase gifts for her friends. The Queen then uses the laces to tighten Snow White’s corset so snugly that it causes her to faint.

The Dwarfs arrive home from work to find Snow White lying on the ground. 1 cuts the laces free causing Snow White to wake up. Snow White tells them about the Old Woman and the Dwarfs realize it must have been the Queen in disguise. They panic for a moment, but 7 reassures them all that if the Queen thinks Snow White is dead, there is nothing to fear. He makes Snow White promise not to open the door to a stranger again.

The Queen returns to the castle and consults the magic mirror once again. And the Mirror replies, “You, my Queen have a beauty most rare, but beyond the woods, where the seven Dwarfs dwell, Snow White is thriving, and this I must tell: She is a thousand times more fair.” The Queen erupts, taking an apple, and vows to poison Snow White.

After the Dwarfs leave for work, Snow White hears a woman crying for help. The woman says her carriage has overturned and she is stranded and hurt. She asks for shelter, but Snow White is hesitant. Finally, after hearing the woman wail in the rain, Snow White decides to let her in. As a token of her appreciation, the woman offers Snow White an apple. Snow White takes a bite of apple and collapses.

The Dwarfs arrive home to find the door open and Snow White lying lifeless on the floor. Believing her to be dead, they place her in a glass coffin with a sign on it reading “Snow White. Our Princess.”

One day, five years later, a Prince shows up. He is very snooty. He spies Snow White in the glass coffin and is excited to read she is a Princess. The Prince has been traveling for years looking for a Princess to save. He kisses Snow White bringing her back to life. They begin to run off together to get married and live in a castle when the play stops. We learn that this version is the story the Prince told. Here’s what really happened:

The kiss didn’t wake Snow White, so the Prince decided to take the glass coffin with him so he may always gaze on her. As the Dwarfs are carrying Snow White’s coffin to his carriage, they stumble, which dislodges a chunk of apple from Snow White’s throat. She can breathe again and she wakes to meet the Prince. Seeing how arrogant and self-important the Prince is, Snow White rejects his marriage proposal and sends him away.

The Queen returns again to kill Snow White, this time with an axe. Thinking Snow White is all alone, she attacks, but is blind-sided by the men who take turns pouncing on her until she promises to go away and never return. Snow White confronts the Queen about the lies. The trees, she says, are not dangerous, they are beautiful. Taking offense to Snow White’s characterization, the Queen raises her axe to cut down a tree when suddenly a host of birds descend upon her. The birds take little pieces of her with them until there is nothing left of the evil Queen.

SW and 4 celebrate their telling of the story. 4 starts to leave so he can tell the others what they’ve accomplished, but he is stopped by SW. The story, she tells him, hasn’t ended. Snow White never returned to the castle. She still lives in the forest with her friends. Through the finishing of the story, we learn that these two are not actors, but the actual Snow White and 4 from the story. They all still live together, dancing and singing, and telling jokes.

SNOW WHITE’S JOKE CORNER

Snow White has the best jokes in this neck of the woods. Tell these jokes to your friends and family for an apple-solutely good time!

If you're happy and you know it...
Can you please head to the theatre? Snow White and the other six dwarves are waiting for you.

How do you get a horse's attention?
"HAY!"

Why did the teddy not like his trip to the beach?
Because the heat was unBEARable!

Which princess would make the best judge?
Snow White, because she's the fairest of them all.

What is a rabbit's favorite hair style?
A bun!

What did the caterpillar say after he threw his margarine?
Butter fly!

Why does no one believe the giraffe's story?
Because it was a tall tale!

What did the horse say when it fell?
I've fallen and I can't giddyup!

Who was Snow White's least favorite relative?
Granny Smith!

What do you call a small pigeon?
A smidgeon.

The story of Snow White takes on many different forms and variations across cultures. You may be familiar with Disney's animated adaptation, but that is by far not the only one. That adaptation is based on the German tale that the Grimm Brothers published in 1812. The story is similar to the Disney adaptation, but has very distinct variations such as none of the dwarves having distinct names, the Queen trying to kill Snow White three times, and the Queen ending up dancing to death while wearing burning iron shoes. Disney obviously opted for a more sanitized version. Other variations of the story include Bella Venezia (an Italian story where an innkeeper locks up her daughter for being more beautiful than her), Myrsina (a Greek story in which the sun claims the youngest of three orphan sisters is the most beautiful so the others try to poison her), and Syair Bidasari (a Malay poem about a girl whose soul is in a golden fish kept in a pond by her father; the evil queen steals the fish because the girl is too beautiful, causing the girl to fall into a coma). The line connecting all of these stories is the idea that one woman tries to persecute or kill another out of jealousy over beauty. The beautiful girl is made to be the victim of her own beauty without having a voice in the matter. At SCT, we wanted to tell a story where Snow White has a say in her own story. Since this tale has been told in many variations all over the world across time, we think it’s the perfect time to reinvent it for our young audiences once again!

SNOW WHITE’S JOKE CORNER
Snow White has the best jokes in this neck of the woods. Tell these jokes to your friends and family for an apple-solutely good time!

If you're happy and you know it...
Can you please head to the theatre? Snow White and the other six dwarves are waiting for you.

Why did the teddy not like his trip to the beach?
Because the heat was unBEARable!

Who was Snow White's least favorite relative?
Granny Smith!

How do you get a horse’s attention?
“HAY!”

What did the horse say when it fell?
I’ve fallen and I can’t giddyup!

What is a rabbit’s favorite hair style?
A bun!

Why does no one believe the giraffe’s story?
Because it was a tall tale!

Which princess would make the best judge?
Snow White, because she’s the fairest of them all.

What did the caterpillar say after he threw his margarine?
Butter fly!

What do you call a small pigeon?
A smidgeon.

The story of Snow White takes on many different forms and variations across cultures. You may be familiar with Disney’s animated adaptation, but that is by far not the only one. That adaptation is based on the German tale that the Grimm Brothers published in 1812. The story is similar to the Disney adaptation, but has very distinct variations such as none of the dwarves having distinct names, the Queen trying to kill Snow White three times, and the Queen ending up dancing to death while wearing burning iron shoes. In-Kind Contribution
Can you talk about your relationship to the story? When did you first hear/read it? What drew you to adapting it?

Like many people, my first experience of the story was through the Disney film. When I was asked by Children's Theatre Company if I would be interested in writing my own version of the story, I knew that there were lots of things that I might want to change and I was curious to see what they might be. First off, I wondered how the Dwarfs would really react if a strange girl turned up on their doorstep wanting shelter. Once accepted by the Dwarfs how would she spend her days? In the original story, Snow White has to clean and cook for the Dwarfs to earn her keep, that didn't seem like much fun and I don't think I would have stayed, so I needed to figure out what she would do, what she would bring to the Dwarfs that would also be good for her. I wondered what would happen if Snow White didn't want to marry the prince, a person she didn't know and maybe didn't even like. What would it be like for the Huntsman having to take Snow White into the woods and leave her there, what would go through his head?

Why did the Stepmother behave so horribly! Lots to explore!

Can you talk about your connection or relationship to fairy tales?

I like fairy tales because they don't shy away from the difficult things in life. The themes are often quite dark and disturbing. Somehow, they have become known as children's stories and as a result of that many of the darker themes, such as poverty, greed, and jealousy, amongst others, have been watered down. When I am adapting these stories, I try to find a way to go to their heart, to be faithful to the difficulties they address. I believe young audiences want to understand the world they find themselves in and it is part of my job to help them do that, not to shy away from scary things but to explore them in the safety of a theatre accompanied with plenty of laughs.

When you sit down to write a play do you know what you are capable of?

Not really. Every new play is a challenge and I never quite believe I will solve the puzzle. It's only through starting to write that I discover how I want to tell the story and what I want to say with it. The act of writing a line of dialogue will suggest the next line and I move on from there, line by line. I do not really plan. I discover what the characters will say rather than figuring it out in advance.

What's the most important reminder when writing gets difficult?

When the writing gets difficult it just means I am not satisfied with what I’m doing. Sometimes it is just difficult and I have to remember that’s ok. So I either leave it for a bit, have a bit of toast, gaze out of the window, go for a walk, or just get something
AN INTERVIEW WITH PLAYWRIGHT GREG BANKS

Can you talk about your relationship to the story? When did you first hear/read it? What drew you to adapting it?

Did you write as a child? If so, what did you write about? What captured your attention and spirit?

I started writing something a bit like poems when I was about twelve. I just wrote words that came into my head, often I didn't understand what they were about, I just enjoyed putting words together and feeling them bounce off each other. I still do that now, making up songs as I go about my day, with lyrics that don't make much sense but are great fun. Luckily no one else has to listen to them, I'm a rotten singer. There is a great freedom in not always having to make sense, in seeing what happens if I just let the words come out.

What do you hope audiences bring to the play?

I hope audiences come prepared to use their imagination, to accept and enjoy our telling of the story even if it feels different to what they may have expected.

What’s your biggest dream for the play?

I don’t have a specific dream for the play as I know everyone brings their own experience to a performance. I guess I would feel I had achieved something if people get to laugh, be a little astonished, have their preconceptions challenged, and take something back into their daily lives. If on some level they feel their spirits have been lifted, then the play will have been a success.
