Dear Friends,

Welcome to the closing show of our 44th season, The Diary of Anne Frank, produced in collaboration with Indiana Repertory Theatre. Based on one of the most read and most inspiring books of all time, Anne’s words have been translated worldwide into more than 70 languages. Her story continues to resonate. We are honored to share her courageous words that shine a light on the ways hope exists in the direst of circumstances.

The act of journaling has long been a powerful activity for young people. In a world where the Jewish community was stripped of power, identity, and security, Anne’s two year process of documenting all that she felt and experienced in the annex illuminates the human impact of the Nazi regime. For young people today, these writings offer a visceral understanding of the day-to-day hardship and emotional cost on human lives. The diary is also talismanic of a parent’s love for a child. Otto Frank became the committed caretaker of the diary and assured generations would explore the experience through Anne’s thoughts.

This production allows us to partner with our colleagues at Indiana Repertory Theatre (IRT). The acting company represents both the cities of Seattle and Indianapolis. They are lifting the work of regional theatre artists across the country. After a well-received run in Indianapolis, we are thrilled to have the company here for six weeks for Seattle audiences. I am so grateful to my dear friend and mentor, Janet Allen, IRT’s Artistic Director, who leads this production with heart and grace.

Special thanks for our community partner, the Holocaust Center for Humanity and Executive Director Dee Simon, who have supported us in contextualizing the production and providing tremendous programming to further young people’s understanding of Anne’s relevance. In a current clime where we see dangerous repetitive patterns from history, including the calls for policies shaped around excluding the “other”, The Diary of Anne Frank reminds us that people are at the center of whether we come together or whether we tear ourselves apart. Anne’s story lives on and may we honor her and all the lives lost in the Holocaust by facing injustice and intolerance arm-in-arm, with an arsenal of love.

Sincerely,

Artistic Director

Act I begins in 1942. The Nazis have occupied the Netherlands, and the Frank family – Otto, Edith, Anne, and Margot – have gone into hiding to escape the persecution of Jews. Otto has prepared a special hidden area in the Annex of his office in Amsterdam for them to hide in. Only two people are made aware of this hiding space – Miep Gies, Otto’s secretary, and Mr. Kraler, one of the managers in his company. Miep and Mr. Kraler will be the Franks’ only connection to the outside world.

Because Otto’s business is still operating, the Frank family must be very careful not to make noise during the day, for fear of being found out. In the beginning, Otto and Anne find hiding away in the Annex to be novel and strive to make it a pleasant place to live. Edith and Margot are less enthusiastic.

A family called the Van Daans also move into the Annex – Hermann, Petronella, Peter and their cat Mouschi. Anne begins to pursue a friendship with Peter, who is shy and not very receptive. The Van Daans update the Franks on what has been happening in the outside world, where conditions for Jews haven’t improved. Anne, having begun to feel the strain of living in the Annex hears this news and reminds herself that her situation could be much worse.

A few months later, Mr. Dussel joins the families in the Annex as a new resident. He brings even more dire news about the war effort. Due to the ever-shrinking space, Anne is forced to share her room with Mr. Dussel. Anne begins having nightmares, and the other residents worry that her screams may eventually lead to their discovery.

Hanukkah arrives and the residents of the Annex enjoy a brief reprieve from the stress of hiding by celebrating together. However, during the party, a loud crashing sound is heard in the business below. Terrified, the residents fall silent. While trying to turn out the lights, Peter accidentally knocks over a chair, after which the residents hear an intruder run out of the building. After a while, Otto sneaks downstairs into the business to discover that the intruder was a burglar, and not the Gestapo. Relieved, he tries to strike up the Hanukkah celebration once again, but the moment has passed.

Act II begins on January 1, 1944, nearly two years after the Franks initially moved into the Annex. Life in the Annex has become routine. The major change for Anne is that she has matured into a young woman and has developed feelings for Peter. They begin having regular visits – privately – in the attic, much to the enjoyment of the adults, excluding Anne’s mother.
Otto Frank learns from Mr. Kraler that an employee has begun asking suspicious questions about the Franks, even going so far as to suggest he might be aware of the secret entrance to their hiding place. Otto agrees to raise the employee’s salary in hopes of avoiding extortion, or worse, discovery.

As the war continues, life outside the Annex becomes harder, which is only amplified for those in hiding. Rationing means that less food makes it to the Annex. Many residents become sick – Margot most of all – and tension builds as everyone struggles to get enough to eat. Things come to a head when Mr. Van Daan is caught stealing bread and Mrs. Frank suggests the Van Daans be kicked out of the Annex.

Eventually, Miep brings good news. Allied forces have invaded Normandy, and the end of the war seems imminent. Things begin to look up. However, it doesn’t last. An anonymous source has betrayed the residents of the Annex, and in August 1944, Nazi soldiers arrive to arrest everyone inside.

At the end, Otto Frank, the only survivor, steps forward to tell us of the fates of each resident. He holds Anne’s diary as the lights fade to black.

Anne Frank’s descriptive writing gave us a way to connect to her experience in the Annex. Read the excerpts from Anne Frank: The Diary of a Young Girl and imagine yourself in the spaces she describes. Using your senses and feelings, write your response to the experiences.

What color, smell, sound do you connect to the space? What do the walls, doors, furniture feel like? What emotion do you feel in the space? Why? Does the description remind you of any place or event in your life?

“The Annex is an ideal place to hide in. It may be damp and lopsided, but there’s probably not a more comfortable hiding place in all of Amsterdam. No, in all of Holland. Up to now our bedroom, with its blank walls, was very bare. Thanks to Father — who brought my entire postcard and movie-star collection here beforehand — and to a brush and a pot of glue, I was able to plaster the walls with pictures. It looks much more cheerful.”

“The large warehouse on the ground floor is used as a workroom and storeroom and is divided into several different sections, such as the stockroom and the milling room, where cinnamon, cloves and a pepper substitute are ground. Next to the warehouse doors is another outside door, a separate entrance to the office. Just inside the office door is a second door, and beyond that a stairway. At the top of the stairs is another door, with a frosted window on which the word “Office” is written in black letters. This is the big front office — very large, very light and very full.”

RESISTANCE IN THE HOLOCAUST

Approximately 30,000 Jews throughout Eastern and Western Europe – many of them teens – fought back during the Holocaust as Jewish partisans. A partisan is a “member of an organized body of fighters who attack or harass an enemy, especially within occupied territory.” The following are the stories of three young people who were part of the resistance.

Carla Peperzak – Netherlands
“I was 18, 19, 20. I was not married. I did not have any responsibility – only for myself – and that made a big difference... I felt I could help. I had the opportunity.”
– Carla Peperzak

Carla Peperzak was born to a Jewish father and Catholic-born mother in Amsterdam in 1923. Carla was a typical youth of the time. She played field hockey, skated on Amsterdam’s canals, and went to parties. She also attended synagogue and Hebrew school where one of her fellow students was Margot Frank, older sister of Anne Frank. In 1940, the year Carla graduated from high school, Germany invaded the Netherlands. By 1941 the Nazis forced Dutch Jews to register with the state and they were issued identification papers marked with a “J.” Due to her mother’s Catholic upbringing, her father was able to have Carla’s papers changed to remove the mark. By 1942, Dutch Jews were being forced to wear the Star of David and her father’s business had been seized.

Thomas Blatt – Poland
“We had no dreams of liberation. We hoped merely to destroy the camp and to die from bullets rather than from gas. We would not make it easy for the Germans.”
– Thomas Blatt, From the Ashes of Sobibor, 1997

Thomas was 16 years old when the Nazis deported his family to the death camp Sobibor in 1943. His family was killed upon arrival, but Thomas was selected for slave labor.

On October 14, 1943, the prisoners in Sobibor, including Thomas, staged a revolt that resulted in the deaths of nearly a dozen Nazis. 300 prisoners escaped, but only 54 lived to see the end of the war. After the uprising, the Nazis demolished the camp, where at least 170,000 people had been murdered. Thomas dedicated his life to ensuring that the crimes at Sobibor were not forgotten. He lived in Seattle for more than 20 years and was a member of the Holocaust Center’s Speakers Bureau.
That year, at the age of 18, Carla joined the Dutch resistance. She helped save her aunt, uncle, and two cousins, hiding them at a farmhouse in the Dutch countryside. Later, disguised as a German nurse, Carla rescued her young cousin from a train bound for Westerbork, a transit camp for Dutch Jews who were then sent to killing centers in Nazi-occupied Poland. Throughout the war she continued to secure hiding places for Jews, published an underground newspaper, and created fake identification papers and ration cards. While Carla and her immediate family survived the Holocaust, 18 members of her family did not. In the aftermath of the war she met her husband Paul, a Dutch Catholic. In the ensuing decades Carla lived and traveled across the world with her husband who worked for the United Nations. In 2004 she moved to Spokane and has been actively engaged in sharing her story as part of the Holocaust Center for Humanity’s Speakers Bureau.

Ed Kaye – Poland
“The reason we went out was not just to hide, but to fight. We were young, maybe idealistic too, but every one of us said, ‘Before I go, I’ll take a couple of them [Nazis] with me.’”
— Ed Kaye

In August 1939, at the age of 18, Ed Kaye was preparing to travel from his home in Pruzhany, Poland, to Palestine for University. He abandoned his plans when Hitler’s army invaded Poland on September 1, 1939. In September of 1941, Ed and his family were among approximately 10,000 Jews from Pruzhany and nearby communities forced by the Nazis into a ghetto that was less than one square mile. In this ghetto, Ed joined a Jewish resistance group that stole weapons and ammunition left by the retreating Soviet Army and stockpiled them for future use.

Ed escaped the ghetto with a group of 18 men and women. They crawled into a drainage ditch and slid under the barbed wire of the ghetto fence. After waiting for the guard above the ditch to leave, they carefully made their way across a frozen lake and through town to the forest beyond. On January 28, 1943, shortly after his escape, deportations from the Pruzhany ghetto to Auschwitz-Birkenau began. Ed then joined a Soviet partisan group, which sabotaged Nazis, destroying telephone lines and railroad tracks with sticks of dynamite lit with cigarettes.
